DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 45, 48-51, 53-55, 58-61, 63-65, 67, 69-71, 73-75, 78, and 79 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hsu, patent number 5,785,598.

As per claims 45, 51, 55, 61, 65, 67, 69-71, 73-75, 78, and 79 Hsu teaches an information processing apparatus (Fig.2) comprising:

a processor (CPU, 11, Fig.2) for executing a booting program to start up said information apparatus (video game apparatus) ; and a first data store (ROM, 21, Fig.2) for storing first data, wherein said processor selectively uses said first data stored in said first data store or second data (ROM, 22, Fig. 2) stored in another data storage according to said booting program to start up said information processing apparatus, said other data storage being capable of data communication. Hsu teaches wherein said first and second data are image data and displaying an image of the selected image data on a display according to said booting program in starting up said information processing apparatus. Hsu is silent in respect to the data store being a non-removable data store. However, making integral the data store that stores the booting program would merely be a matter of obvious. (In re Larson, 340 F.2d 965, 968, 144 USPQ 347, 349 (CCPA 1965))

Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill at the time the invention was made to implement an internal ROM into an information processing apparatus wherein the internal ROM has the ability to execute a booting program to start up the information processing apparatus because Hsu specifically allows another data storage that has the ability to execute a booting program that would further enhance the booting process of the information processing apparatus.

As per claims 48, 49, 54, and 58, Hsu teaches wherein the first data storage includes at least one of image data and sound data but does not expressly teach wherein the other data storage for storing said second data is a recording medium removably connected to said information processing apparatus also includes image and sound data. Hsu's game console (50) includes an audio outlet (via 13, Fig. 2) and a video outlet (via 15, Fig. 2) for outputting sound and image data for an inserted video game cartridge. It is well known in the art at the time the invention was made that video game cartridge's include sound and image programs that are used in accordance with a game console's audio and video outlets. Hsu teaches wherein the second data storage includes additional image programs for a video game cartridge related to the first data storage wherein the first data storage includes video game data for the related video game cartridge, therefore, one of ordinary skilled in the art would readily recognize that the second data storage includes additional programs including at least one image data and sound data related to the first data storage that will be outputted via the game console's audio and video outlets.

As per claims 50, 53, 60, and 63, Hsu teaches wherein the other data storage is a portable electronic device.

As per claim 59, Hsu teaches a method wherein an image of said first data is displayed on a display (television set, 18) in starting up said information processing apparatus when said recording medium is not connected to said information processing apparatus, and an image of said second data is displayed on said display in starting up said information processing apparatus when said recording medium is connected to said information processing apparatus.
